Dean of Students

Dedication

Miss Margaret Hargrove, Dean of Students, is one of the most respected members of the administration. Devoted both to her work and to the students, she wins the admiration of all who know her. With wise counsel, she guides Mary Washington girls toward purposeful lives of scholarship, leadership, and fellowship. In deep gratitude for this counsel and in remembrance of her sincerity, ready smile, and quick wit, we dedicate
THE 1965 BATTLEFIELD to

MISS MARGARET HARGROVE

The Battlefield

1956

HIS year marks the BATTLEFIELD's Golden Anniversary. With the exception of the war years 1917 and 1918, the book has appeared uninterruptedly since 1913 and each year the staff has endeavored to mirror faithfully the kaleidoscopic whirl of events which is life at Mary Washington College.

This year, as in the past, the freshmen have learned to assume the many new responsibilities of dormitory living, independent decision making, and academic freedom. The sophomores have fought with and overcome the traditional second year slump in working towards the success of their class projects. The juniors have shown their initiative and growing maturity by serving as freshman house presidents and counselors and by making memorable one of the year's foremost events, the Ring Dance. The seniors have assumed major positions of campus leadership as SGA and Honor Council presidents, committee chairmen, directors of publications, and house presidents, while at the same time beginning to look beyond college to jobs and marriage.

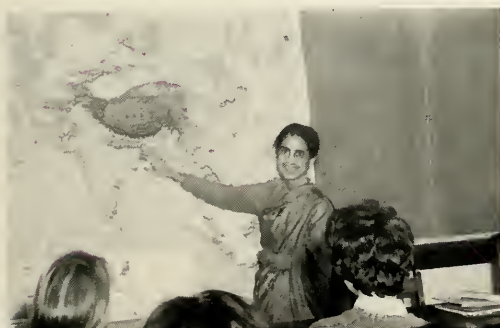

From these activities, as always, comes the substance of a successful college year. The 1965 BATTLEFIELD hopes to capture in pictures and words the most meaningful experiences of the students. Seen as a whole, these should make a portrait of a memorable year.

MARY WASHINGTON COLLEGE
UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA

The College

Administration and Faculty

Faculty, 1914

I know I can speak for all of you—faculty, staff, students and friends, in saying that on this night when once again at this convocation we come together to begin a new college session, our fervent aim and desire are that our purposes as an academic institution will be so clearly stated and exemplified, our program of instruction of such high caliber in its scholarly profundity and its creative integrity, our students so committed to the task assigned and the goals to reach for, that a person may say that at Mary Washington College, using Gertrude Stein's words, "They have done it, they do it, they will do it, and they do it in every way in which education is thought about."

And when that is said, a very great deal will have been said—and done!

I am suggesting that instruction and education need not be or do the same thing—in fact one can be almost the enemy of the other. Instruction may become dogma, propaganda, prejudice—partially informed opinion—everything that the cultivated intellect would consider base and unworthy of a society of free men dedicated to the pursuit of Truth. Likewise, education may claim to be all things to all people, devoid of the intellectual responsibilities of choice and decision, merely a reservoir of information, of unsorted bits and parcels, without substance, and basically without essence.

It is foolish, certainly now, to believe that all information—to quote Bacon—all knowledge—can be any one man's province—but it is also equally true that one man's province is certainly not all knowledge.

In the great drive of mankind for the cultivated intellect, one of his essential goals is to achieve some grasp of the mystery of the world, some light on the "enigma without," and on his identity with this enigma. I think the great Pascal has stated the point more clearly and more profoundly than any other writer with whom I am familiar:

"When I consider the short duration of my life, swallowed up in an eternity that stretches behind and before, and the little space which I fill and even see, engulfed in the immensity of spaces I know not me, I am frightened and astonished at being here, rather than there; for there is no reason why here rather than there; why now rather than then."

If our methods and scope of instruction or learning here at Mary Washington are such as I have described, and I believe that they are; if you as students are prepared and committed to make use of the opportunity which has been afforded you to achieve the "cultivated intellect"; if one so instructed and so educated is ready to face the problems and to discriminate between logical progress and mere expediency in the real and very material world, as and in addition to what Pascal described as the "illogical enigma without," then I am inclined to agree with Gertrude Stein that "Almost anything is not done in the way it is thought about—but education is." And that, my friends, "is saying a very great deal!"

(From the Chancellor's Convocation Address, September 17, 1964.)

BETTY LEWIS

Although outmatched in size by the other freshmen dorms, Betty Lewis stands unrivalled in its spirit. The rain of the first day did not mar the enthusiasm and excitement that each girl felt as she began her first year at college. With this same enthusiasm and excitement the girls threw themselves actively into the life here on the hill. The coming of the Christmas season showed all the residents giving their various talents to the production of a beautifully decorated parlor, whose theme was "Angels We Have Heard On High."

As exam time rolled around and the dorm was quiet with strict study, girls frantically crammed, crammed, and crammed some more. Exams over, a new semester began. Often on Saturday nights girls were seen peeping through the curtains of the doors at the "callers in the parlor." Anxiously awaited long-distance phone calls brought gleeful smiles to the faces of many dorm members. Early dawn fire drills brought gripes and cold feet. But all through the year Betty Lewis girls pursued their primary goal of academic proficiency. As the year ended, the girls eagerly looked forward to sophomore status, yet felt a little reluctant at leaving their dorm "down the hill."

BUSHNELL

Named in honor of Nina G. Bushnell, for many years Dean of Mary Washington, Bushnell dormitory opened its doors to students for the first time in 1959.

Today, it houses 144 girls from all four classes, thus continuing its "mixed dorm" tradition begun back in 1959. Situated across the reservoir from the Science Building, it is a favorite with the mathematics, biology, and chemistry majors, as its proximity to their "home" permits five minutes of extra sleep in the morning.

Each year all of the girls in the dormitory sign and send both a Christmas and a Mother's Day card to Mrs. Bushnell. This too is a tradition dating back to the beginning of the dorm.

This year the girls built their Christmas decorations around the nativity theme, using a stained glass effect, achieved through the use of colored cellophane and a good deal of hard work on the part of the residents of the dorm.

Happiness is an elevator

Some people dream of working on Capitol Hill; others would rather live on Marshall hill, or rather, at the bottom of it. Mary Washington students have finally realized what an ideal location the Marshall girls enjoy. The dorm's proximity to town makes shopping trips convenient. And dashing to Scotty's for pastry is a familiar routine. Who counts calories? The well-developed calf has always been a sign of beauty and the Marshall residents proudly display theirs.

Mrs. Prasse and her girls played hostess to the Great Pumpkin early in the year, and he cheerfully sent what all the girls had hoped for: an icy mound down which to slide. He also sent a fire drill at two o'clock in the morning, purple dye in one of the washers, and an abundance of stale doughnuts in the candy machine. Because they live some distance from other dorms, Marshall girls become close friends and together share common pleasures: not having an eight-thirty in Dupont, or a leisurely elevator ride to the third floor.

Somebody'd better put another note on the stick file!

MASON

Mason was the center of much bustling activity on a warm afternoon last September. Its 200 residents had returned for a new school year, and everyone somehow managed to get through the chaos of moving into her room, unpacking, and registering. Then we settled down to the routine of going to classes and seeing student-teachers clicking down the halls in their heels, juniors planning for the Ring Dance, sophomores muddling through "sophomore slump," and a few lonely freshmen looking overwhelmed by it all.

October and Hallowe'en came, and the dorm took time out to celebrate with a Hallowe'en party; then we were caught up in the excitement of Election Day. The Election stickers soon disappeared from the doors, however, and were replaced with calendars counting the days until Thanksgiving Vacation. Thanksgiving came and went, and, before we knew it, Christmas and the Christmas Formal had arrived. The parlor was suddenly aglow with Christmas trees and decorations while people went around humming snatches of Christmas carols.

We succeeded in living through first semester exams, and second semester found us looking hopefully for signs of spring. With the arrival of the warm weather, we all flocked outside in the hope of getting a good tan; and the seniors looked with anticipation to graduation while the rest of us looked with dread to final exams. But we all agreed that it had been a great year.

RANDOLPH

This year Randolph dormitory greeted its residents with something new—a coat of fresh green paint. Anxious to decorate her green room, each girl busily bought bedspreads, rugs, and curtains. After the excitement of beginning the year abated, the girls settled down to hard work and fun.

One of the highlights of the first semester was an election party on November 4. Both elated and disappointed girls attended the party, but nearly everyone left in better spirits after enjoying refreshments and entertainment by the dorm members.

As Christmas approached, the girls pitched in and shared the hard work of decorating the parlor. The result of their labor was a forest snow scene with a small boy pulling a sled.

The year was filled with many memories. Who could possibly forget peeping through the parlor doors to catch a glimpse of one's blind date? Or the delightful aromas floating from the kitchens? Or the after-closing-hour phone calls, the all-night bridge games, and the dorm parties?

Amid all the fun and gaiety, however, the girls never forgot the serious academic purpose of college. As tests and exams approached, Randolph residents made frequent treks to the library and often burned the midnight oil. When May 31st came and the girls headed home, they all carried with them happy memories of a year in Randolph.

TRI-UNIT

The girls of Madison, Ball, and Custis, the three dormitories comprising Tri-Unit, enjoyed a wonderful year with many memories. Who could ever forget hanging over the balconies in Ball to see the callers in the parlor? Or the excitement every time someone played the Marine Corps' Hymn on the piano? Or scrambling to have one's date out on time? Fall was plagued with worries over mid-semester exams and, "Oh, what shall I wear to the Marine Ball!" The dorm was deserted on the big weekends at Virginia. And no one ever seemed to remember that those end doors are locked early and that the shades must be drawn by six o'clock. Winter brought a change of the head residents in Tri-Unit. And then came the excitement of Christmas, with the snow, the decorations, and a carol played on some hi-fi every hour. The ritual clanking of the pipes seemed only a small nuisance. Exams arrived, and somehow everyone made it through all right. Then came spring, the time when a young girl's fancy turns to . . . Thoughts were on the Ring Dance and the coming vacation. Weekly room inspections presented the only problem until exam time once again approached. Graduation brought tears to the seniors in Tri-Unit and to many of their friends, too. It was a wonderful year for the girls in Tri-Unit.

VIRGINIA

Housing only freshmen for the first time in two years, Virginia was this year alive with the spirit that only a freshman dorm can have. The girls gave an early indication of this spirit on beanie yell-off day, succeeding not only in yelling off their beanies, but in capturing and holding the Devil Flag—a hard won prize. This enthusiasm was also apparent in the more serious dorm activities. The new seminar program, directed by English instructor Miss Suzanne Pharr and dealing with the contemporary novel, was very well received. Similarly, the vespers programs, assisted by the newly formed choir, were also quite successful.

From the first days of excitement and adjustments, through the ordeal of the first exams, to the joy of the arrival of spring, heralding the successful completion of their first year, the Virginia ladies found 1965 a year to remember.

WESTMORELAND

As in past years, the return of students to Westmoreland Hall in September was synonymous with another event. Rescued once again from a closet where he had spent the summer months was Petulant, a large white plaster mask, the traditional Westmoreland mascot. Playing a dual role as both a good luck charm and guardian angel, Petulant assumed his resting place in one student's room where he could live for the year and sell his magic for the price of a kiss. His power and help soon came to be depended upon. Exam-clutched sophomores sought his aid. Apprehensive juniors implored Petulant to encourage the right young man to accept an invitation to the Ring Dance. And seniors confided in him nightly the number of days left until graduation.

Westmoreland residents worked long and hard on their Christmas parlor decorations entitled "And The Bear Helped Too." Their labor was rewarded when the dorm placed third in the campus decorations competition.

As the year closed, all the girls said a private "thank you" to Petulant for having been such a good friend.

WILLARD

Fall always brings to Willard dorm many new freshmen anxious to begin their college career. This year was no exception: the green-beanied girls faced the ordeal of registration, met their professors, and began classes. As the year progressed and the residents made friends in the dorm, they became aware of a growing feeling known as the "Willard Spirit." The contagious spirit became obvious when the girls gathered for bull sessions, coke parties, and bridge. Sharing problems and joys brought a sense of unity and partnership in the college community.

Christmas brought the excitement of going home and of seeing the campus brightly decorated for the holidays. Willard's parlor was decorated as an old English Inn, displaying the artistic talents and hard work of the dorm members.

Musical ability was evident as Willardites entertained at many campus and dorm social events. Willard also proudly claimed many freshman officers. The girls were active in class projects and enjoyed campus opportunities.

As each student left Willard at the end of May, she took with her fond memories of a wonderful year, filled with many new friendships and that intangible, but ever-present, Willard Spirit.

A whisk in time could have saved nine for Willard's weekly room inspection

BRENT

Spending a semester or a year in Brent leads not only to a better usage of the French language but also to a wider knowledge of French thought and customs. This year's seminar emphasized modern French writings. Girls who had recently been in France related their experiences, thus stimulating interest and enthusiasm in other students for future visits.

Instead of the traditional Christmas activities, the girls presented an outdoor pageant in French and sang carols in French.

Because of the dorm's small size, the girls enjoyed an intimacy and sense of purpose unequalled in most of the larger dormitories.

The spirit of sharing all things is one of Framar's attributes

"Froelich Weinachten"—A new German house on campus? No, it's only Framar in German dress for Christmas. The girls went European all the way; they even left their shoes outside their doors for the visit from St. Nicholas!

One of the benefits of living in Framar was being able to participate in the seminar. This year the seminar consisted of speakers and question-answer periods on all facets of twentieth-century culture, from the fine arts to the presidential election.

Since the dorm is small, the girls enjoyed a home-like atmosphere and close companionship with one another.

MARYE

Nestled between the library and Mason Dorm, the Spanish House, Marye, is the home of fifteen students of Spanish. All enjoy the advantages of small dorm life, each resident holding an office and participating actively in dorm affairs. Mrs. Ana de Amador is professor-in-residence and serves in an advisory capacity to the students.

Observing the purpose of the dorm, the residents practice conversational Spanish daily. This year seminars were held regularly with authors and ambassadors included among the speakers.

TRENCH HILL

Going beyond the traditional concept of residence hall living is Trench Hill's seminar program, undertaken to create an exciting atmosphere for intellectual debate outside the classroom. The dorm's small size and the common interest of its residents in the Great Books seminar generate a real sense of cohesion and rapprochement which facilitates free discussion. Trench Hill is the embodiment of an intellectual ideal, a truly democratic community in which the disciplined student can find stimulation and pleasure through the mutual interchange of ideas in the seminar.

ANN FAIRFAX ANNEX

Ann Fairfax Annex, the Home Economics house, is used by the Home Economics majors for the semester of residence required by the Home Economics Department. Managing the house entirely by themselves, the girls apply their practical knowledge of home economy.

Second semester the house welcomed a special guest resident, Miss Padmabai Rubgundi, visiting lecturer in the humanities from Women's Christian College, Madras, India.

Nothing like a little home-cooking to make you forget Seacobeck!

THE HAMLET HOUSE

The Hamlet House, located next to Ann Fairfax, was once the home of former math professor William N. Hamlet who taught at Mary Washington for thirty years (1911-1941). Left to the college, Hamlet House today serves two functions: the first floor is used by the Psychology department for classes and clinical testing; the upstairs houses the alternate head residents.

SPOTSWOOD ALUMNAE HOUSE

Named in honor of Alexander Spotswood, lieutenant-governor of Virginia during the early eighteenth century, the Spotswood Alumnae House is located across from the main college gates. Formerly used as a dormitory, the building now serves as the meeting place for the Mary Washington Alumnae Association Board and as the storage place for its records.

HONOR COUNCIL

Honor—its presence or absence on our campus—depends on each individual's ability to live up to the high ideals established by the Honor Code. The Honor Council feels that maintenance of these ideals depends on each student's full understanding of the honor code. With this as its goal, the Honor Council strives to instill in each Mary Washington student a sense of personal integrity and honor. To insure success, the Council has created two new traditions. The first involves membership in the Council. A girl elected from each class now takes the position formerly held by the class president. Thus each Honor Council representative can devote her full efforts toward furthering the Honor Code's aims. The second concerns the freshmen. In addition to receiving the usual intensive training from orientation counsellors, they now participate in an assembly at which they formally pledge their dedication to the upholding of the honor system.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION

The Student Government Association of Mary Washington College is the self-governing student organization which legislates and enforces the rules which govern a student's daily life. Structurally this organization is divided into three branches: executive, legislative, and judicial. The officers of Student Government are elected each spring by the students. Committees are filled by appointment.

This year the major accomplishment of Student Government was to overhaul the structure of the organization by redefining the duties of the three branches, eliminating unnecessary positions, and creating needed ones. Under the reorganization the punishments on the dormitory level are handled by the automatic punishment system. A proposal to effect the reorganization was submitted to the student body early in the fall; they overwhelmingly approved the change.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT

Under this year's revision of the Student Government Association, the Legislative Council is now composed of one representative from each class, plus the dorm legislative vice presidents, a day student representative, SGA secretary, and SGA treasurer.

As one of the three major branches of the Student Government, the Legislative Council is a vital part of campus life. It discusses activities of the student body and, as changes become necessary, makes revisions in the rules governing the students.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT

The Student Government Association's Constitutional revisions effected some changes in the Judicial Council. Now made up of representatives from each class, the Council is headed by the SGA Judicial vice president.

The primary purpose of the Council is to try cases involving student violation of SGA regulations. With the advent of the automatic punishment system, the Council has also assumed the role of an appellate court. Girls disagreeing with an automatic punishment may ask the Judicial Council to change or lessen it.

EXECUTIVE CABINET

New this year, the Executive Cabinet of SGA is composed of the house presidents and is chaired by the Student Government president. Formerly, house presidents had judicial, legislative, and executive responsibilities. Now, however, the house presidents can devote their full efforts to the co-ordination of dorm activities. In addition they have more time to promote a congenial atmosphere among dorm residents.

The Executive Cabinet's chief function is to co-ordinate the Judicial and Legislative branches of Student Government and the councils and committees of SGA.

FRESHMAN COUNSELORS

Familiar to all freshmen are the faces of the Freshman Counselors, the upperclassmen who strive to encourage in each freshman the desire to achieve an individual sense of belonging in the college community.

The Freshman Counselors, who live in the freshman dormitories, accept a large responsibility and render a true service to their college, functioning in every capacity from answering service to confidante. Outstanding individuals and leaders, they add a feeling of joy and an air of purpose to the first bustle of freshman confusion and represent the deep sense of unity and helpfulness throughout the student body at Mary Washington College.

SECRETARIAT

Under the Student Government Association's Constitutional revision a new organization came into being—the Secretariat. It is composed of the dormitory secretaries and is chaired by the SGA secretary.

The Secretariat's primary function is to help the SGA committees with their secretarial work. This year the organization was especially useful in issuing invitations to the SGA installation service.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT

New on campus this year is the Treasury Department. The Department is composed of the dormitory treasurers and is chaired by the SGA treasurer. One of the primary functions of this organization is the co-ordination of dorm finances. By discussing the dorm's monetary problems as a group, the treasurers can find solutions for their individual difficulties. The Treasury Department also handles the distribution of the "Sleep-Study" signs.

JOINT COUNCIL

As its name implies, Joint Council is a co-operative council of students and faculty. Composing the Council are the executive officers of the Student Government Association and three faculty members appointed by the Chancellor. The Chancellor is an ex-officio member and has the power of veto over the Council's decisions.

Joint Council's chief function is to try cases involving students who have committed serious infractions of SGA regulations. In addition the Council assigns punishments to girls found guilty.

INTER-CLUB ASSOCIATION

ANNE HALL PLUMMER
President

The Inter-Club Association, one of the most inclusive organizations on campus, swung into full action last September with the annual I.C.A. Open House. This year, however, before the Open House, the I.C.A. sponsored an interest poll among the freshmen and transfer students so that an intensive effort could be made to direct new students into club activities. The I.C.A. emphasis on the importance of club participation for all students continued into the second semester. A "Little Open House" was held to interest students who had not been able to join clubs in the fall.

"The Cap and Gown Chapter of Mortar Board is pleased to tap" With these words each spring a new group of girls receives one of the highest honors that can be bestowed upon them at MWC, induction into Mortar Board, the National Honor Society for senior college women. For a student to be selected for membership she must have exhibited capabilities not only in scholarship but also in leadership and service. Candidates are selected from the Junior and Senior classes and pledge themselves to promote college loyalty, advance the spirit of service and fellowship among university women, promote and maintain high standards of scholarship, and recognize and encourage leadership.

Among the many activities of Mortar Board are maintaining of the lost and found service and the Information Booth in George Washington Hall, distributing concert tickets to faculty members and students, selling student calendars, maintaining the Graduate Study Bureau, sponsoring receptions for those students on the Dean's list, and selecting the outstanding sophomore. This year Mortar Board worked to modify the existing tour program for prospective students by using members of the Senior class as guides.

WHO'S WHO

Each year, outstanding college students from approximately 775 institutions are recognized by Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges. This year twenty-seven students of Mary Washington College were so recognized.

Selection to this organization depends on several factors. Any four-year, degree-granting institution may submit nominations. The quota of each institution is determined by the total enrollment. The nominees must be juniors, seniors, or students enrolled in graduate courses who have displayed outstanding scholarship, leadership, citizenship, and cooperation in educational and extracurricular activities. Final selection is made by Who's Who.

Every student who is chosen to be a member is notified by the organization. He receives from Who's Who a certificate of recognition, a writeup in the annual publication, and the benefits of the organization's Student Placement Service when applying for jobs, fellowships, scholarships, and admission to graduate school.

The Young Women's Christian Association takes an active part in life on Mary Washington campus. Its goal is to stimulate each student's development of a "full and creative life through a growing knowledge of God."

The club's activities radiate from a cabinet made up of executive officers, advisors, committee chairmen, freshman class representatives, and members from each campus religious group. The Y.W.C.A. has recently added a new committee to those already existing. This is the Peace Corps Committee created to acquaint students with the purpose and work of the Peace Corps. One of the year's major projects was the campus-wide drive for World University Service to aid in education in undeveloped or disaster areas.

Further activities included the traditional Y.W.C.A. sponsored Big Sister program. Throughout the year the sophomore Big Sisters helped acquaint the freshmen Little Sisters with campus life.

In recognition of its fiftieth year of publication, this year's BATTLEFIELD has sought not only to preserve a record of Mary Washington 1965 but also to renew a sense of the college's past.

In the creative realm, the editorial, copy, art, and photography staffs have worked steadily throughout the year to harmonize the old and new in an historic panorama of life at Mary Washington. Equally important, but necessarily in the background, have been the business, advertising, and circulation staffs, struggling heroically to finance this dream.

We hope that the 1965 BATTLEFIELD will be to you an enduring composite of all the many activities that have made Mary Washington College a cherished alma mater.

Twice each month students on campus receive copies of the Bullet, culminating a period of concentrated and often frantic work on the part of the girls who compose its staff. The quality of work produced and the range of coverage bear witness to their attempt to provide their fellow students with a broad and reliable source of information about campus life—past, present, and future.

Membership on the staff is open to anyone, and the variety of positions insures something for most interests since students handle all the work—including layouts, assigning and writing articles, typing, taking photographs, and doing art work.

Students talented in the fields of literature, art, or music are able to express themselves through The Epaulet, one of Mary Washington's three major student publications. This journal of the creative arts encourages original works of poetry, fiction, criticism, art, and music. The staff urges each student on campus to submit material for possible publication. In this way The Epaulet is a creative outlet for the entire student body. Appearing thrice annually, The Epaulet can be purchased either by yearly subscription or by the issue. The result of much hard work, the finished product is an important cultural asset to the college.

SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS

September came and we returned to Mary Washington as Seniors, a little awed that we had reached the final semesters of our college career. We remembered our first three years with nostalgia. Freshman year had brought red and white beanies and great expectations; Sophomore year, books, books, and more books; Junior year, the Ring Dance. But our senior year proved to be the most exciting.

Far from retreating into the traditional senior ivory tower, we rented our caps and gowns, attended the Chancellor's Convocation, threw ourselves into academic and extracurricular activities, and assumed positions of responsibility on campus.

Through the fall and winter and into the spring, we busied ourselves with student teaching, job interviews, 400 courses, job interviews, Graduate Record Exams, and more job interviews. The class joined with the juniors and sophomores to sponsor a combo party on May Day, and we proudly dedicated our gift to the school, a large map of the campus to be placed at the college gates. Senior Day came and went, and our closets bulged with freshly ironed clothes and our cars sparkled.

As we donned the academic robes and to "Pomp and Circumstance" marched down the aisle in George Washington Hall, we faced the future with optimism, secure in the knowledge that we had taken full advantage of the opportunities of a college career.

Juniors

JUNIOR CLASS OFFICERS

"Anyone have any Top Value Stamps?" For months, the juniors collected Top Value Stamps with which to "purchase" a Bermuda vacation. The response enabled the class to offer the vacation as a door prize at their class project, a talent-variety show entitled "Bermuda Shorts." With money in the bank, the juniors turned their thoughts to the Junior Ring Dance.

The intervening weeks were filled with tests and papers, but also with college week-ends and serenades.

Ring Dance finally arrived, and the Cinderellas danced with their escorts in a ballroom decorated to the theme of "Rhapsody in Blue."

All too quickly May came and the juniors realized their wonderful year had come to an end. Anxiously, they looked forward to their senior year. But memories remained of responsible hours spent as House President, Freshman Counselor, dorm officer, and club member. Memories remained, too, of fun-filled hours spent in planning and living an exciting year.

Sophomores

Sophomore year is traditionally characterized by the "slump." Members of the Class of 1967 decided to change this and their motto became the "Sophomore Surge," signifying a year of excitement and activity. With enthusiasm they plunged into life in mixed dorms without freshman counselors. They assumed positions of responsibility in clubs and organizations. They served as orientation counsellors and Big Sisters. They found a challenge and met the challenge successfully. They were the initiators of fresh ideas, such as the plan to expand the May Day program to include a dance in addition to the traditional ceremonies.

In keeping with their new spirit, the class conceived an imaginative project. From films taken throughout the year, sophomores made a movie entitled "Campus Confidential." To entice students to the showing of the film, the class arranged to have fraternity men serve as ushers.

With a successful year behind them, the sophomores looked forward to an even more rewarding junior year.

FRESHMAN CLASS OFFICERS

To the freshmen of Mary Washington, September meant the beginning of a new life. Eagerly they plunged into a world filled with beanies, serenades, freshmen and orientation counsellors, college week-ends, tests, and studying. Adjustment was quickly made to new surroundings and friends.

The freshmen were the initiators of several new campus activities. The freshman dorms, Willard and Virginia, saw the establishment of seminar programs to foster intellectual stimulation. The class sponsored a play day with a picnic lunch followed by games and folk singing, then a sit-down dinner succeeded by a combo party. The door prize for the event was a week's trip to Ocean City, Maryland. Class members also originated a bi-monthly Freshman Newsletter, which provided reminders of events of particular interest to freshmen.

Spring brought the inevitable quandary of where and with whom to room. While they impatiently anticipated the coming of summer and vacation, the freshmen at the same time mulled happily over the memories of the year just past.

MAY DAY

Sponsored by the Student Government Association, the May Day program is one of the highlights of the college year. At the beginning of the second semester, each of the classes chooses four girls as representatives to the May Court. The queen and maid-of-honor are chosen from the senior class. This year the queen, Stephanie Cadman, and her maid-of-honor, Carolyn Kennett, reigned over the festivities, whose theme was "My Fair Lady." Included in the ceremonies were the promenade of the queen and her court, the coronation of the queen, and the twining of the maypole.

After the formal ceremonies, the May Day Committee held a tea for students, faculty, and guests. Later in the evening the sophomores, juniors, and seniors were the sponsors of a combo party for students and their guests.

Epilogue

What is the usual fate of a yearbook? For a few days, perhaps, the pictures are glanced at and the articles scanned. Soon, however, the book is cast aside and is seemingly forgotten. But there comes a time when the yearbook is again examined. Part of the enjoyment of every experience is reliving it in one's memory. With this in mind the BATTLEFIELD has endeavored to preserve in words and pictures the manifold aspects of life behind the ivy-covered walls of Mary Washington College.

This has been a year of changes at Mary Washington. The Honor Council and the Student Government Association both underwent close scrutiny, then revision by the student body. The result was to make the two governing bodies considerably stronger and more unified.

The four classes, too, saw significant changes; underclassmen received many privileges previously reserved for upperclassmen. On the academic side, new departments were added, and some departments broadened their course offerings.

Yet, while obviously important, these changes could at the most but reinforce elements of life at Mary Washington which are unchanging. The enthusiasm for academic excellence, the delight in social activities, and the ardor in pursuit of established goals are part of our college experience that time cannot erode.

As the pages are closed on another college year, it is natural for each of us to reflect on her favorite memories, to cherish the recollection of her private triumphs and joys. At the same time, we should none of us forget our common share in the larger memory of unchanging high ideals of scholarship, leadership, and fellowship which is our lasting heritage from Mary Washington College.

A SALUTE TO THE ADVERTISERS

I would like to take this opportunity to thank each of the advertising firms for the major part they have played in production of the 1965 BATTLEFIELD.

Their support and good will have made possible what we feel is an outstanding yearbook. We are proud to have each of our old and new friends represented in our advertising section.

On behalf of the students of Mary Washington College, I wish to express their appreciation not only for the contributions you, the advertisers, have made toward a successful yearbook but also for the services you have rendered throughout the years.

By retaining a competent Architect, an Owner will have immediate assurance that his building program will be conceived and executed in an attractive, efficient and economical manner. It is a well established fact that a structure designed by an Architect retains its value through the years and normally continues to function in a higher degree than one built without the benefit of architectural services.

Now what?

Now that you have graduated you must answer the inevitable question — “now what?” For all of you it means the continuation of studies in one way or another, because learning must and will continue throughout your lives.

In the years to come you may have no more report cards or examinations, but everything you do will be judged realistically. Your preparation for every goal will be carefully watched, thoughtfully evaluated.

Your courses have given you the tools for thought and judgment. They will serve you well, whatever the future has in store for you.

Here at American Viscose we owe much of our progress to the adoption of new ideas, new improved methods and fresh approaches brought to us by young people like yourselves who never learned to stop learning.
